

The Center for Development Research (ZEF) is an institute of the University of Bonn, Germany. ZEF's researchers aim to find science-based solutions to development-related issues. ZEF's research departments on Economic and Technological Change, Political and Cultural Change, and Ecology and Natural Resources Management conduct inter and transdisciplinary research in, for and with emerging economies and on global issues with its collaborating research partners around the world. ZEF educates doctoral students in its Doctoral Studies Program. More information is available at www.zef.de.

The team of the research project „At the Science Policy Interface: LANd Use SYnergies and CONflicts within the framework of the 2030 Agenda (LANUSYNCON)“ at the Center for Development Research (ZEF) invites applications for the position of a

Research Assistants/Student Assistant (WHK/WHF – 10 to 19 hours/week)

We offer:

- Joining a dynamic and international team of researchers.
- Diversified tasks: project administration, workshop organization public relations and data management.
- Participate in a new inter- and transdisciplinary research project with a focus on land use conflicts and synergies in Kenya and Tanzania.
- Support scientists from different countries and different disciplinary backgrounds.

Requirements and responsibilities:

- Master or Bachelor degree in Geography, Biology, Agriculture, Sustainability Science, Political Science, Economics or related fields.
- Team player, excellent communication and organisation skills.
- Experience in project management and public relations.
- Highly proficient in English and German.

Other skills which may be an advantage for the applicant:

- Experience in University Administration.
- Analytical skills (quantitative analyses).
- Experience in GIS data analysis.

The position is will start at the earliest possible date. According to the university regulations applicants with a doctorate can not be considered for the position. Applications (cover letter and CV) should be sent by e-mail in one pdf document (less than 2 MB) to Dewi Idam Sari dsari@uni-bonn.de until 19th of September 2021.

ZEF promotes the equality of women and men. Women are therefore especially encouraged to apply.